WORKS IN PROGRESS

- [W.1] “Beyond Payoff Maximization: Authoritarian Resilience and Policy Experimentation in China.” Work in progress.
Develops a risk-management account of policy experimentation in authoritarian regimes. The project constructs an original subnational measure of regional resilience and examines how structural, institutional, and social capacities shape pilot selection and post-reform outcomes in China.
- [W.2] “Crisis-Driven Institution Building: Evidence from COVID-19.” Working paper, with Xiongfu Xiao.
Develops a sequential theory of crisis-driven institution building in which crisis pressure generates emergency institutions that subsequently sediment into routinized governance. The empirical analysis uses a country-week panel of COVID-19 responses from 2020 to 2022, fixed effects, and a leave-one-out exposure instrumental-variable design based on pre-pandemic mobility networks.
- [W.3] “Administrative Reform as Institutional Purge: Evidence from Vietnam.” Working paper, with Xiongfu Xiao and Qingwen Deng.
Develops a theory of institutional purge in authoritarian administrative reform. Using Vietnam's 2025 province-level consolidation, the project combines a formal model with an original dataset linking province-level institutional survival, central elite profiles, and local elite career networks.
- [W.4] State Presence as State Building*. Master's thesis in progress, Duke University.
Examines how state presence contributes to state building in contemporary China, with attention to the relationship between bureaucratic presence, institutional control, and state capacity.
